IT'S A SUCCESS

Alcatraz prison as escape-proof as a modern prison can be made. That has been the official word from the time "the rock" was ready for business.

Yet, last week five prisoners almost escaped. They were caught trying to leave the island. One was killed by guards, another gravely wounded.

It was the second case of its kind. The first time, two prisoners escaped. Neither was heard of; it is probable they drowned trying to swim to the mainland.

Plainly Alcatraz isn't fool proof. With a population of desperate, long term criminals concentrating on possibilities of escape every minute of every day, it couldn't be fool proof.

But if its buildup was supposed to give the impression that it proves only fools take the chance of landing there, the thing's a roaring success. Even tough customers who think of prison as a place to get out of must be convinced by this time.

MR. MURPHY REPENTS

Frank Murphy's belated stand for law and order as against sitdown strikes helps to clear the air, but his repentance would have done more good had it been spoken while Murphy was governor of Michigan.

Like Harry Hopkins, who has admitted after a political reversal that politics should have been kept out of WPA, Mr. Murphy has done by hindsight what he should have done by foresight.

When sitdown strikes were a serious problem, particularly in Michigan's auto plants, they had the benefit of the tacit approval of political officials whose personal influence over strikers was presumed to be very great.

The President of the United States was one of these. Miss Perkins, secretary of labor, was another. Mr. Murphy was another. It is reassuring to hear at this late date that Mr. Murphy at least understood the danger of letting strikers take the law into their own hands and was prepared to say so. It does not absolve him of blame for compromising with his executive responsibilities under pressure.

A NEW BROOM IN COLUMBUS

Whisk! goes the new broom in Columbus and out go the jobholders, hundreds at a time. What becomes of them nobody knows. Some will go back to work.

Ohio is pleased at continued evidence that the Bricker administration intends to make a clean sweep of needless jobs in the state government. For taxpayers it's like finding gold in their own backyard.

But only the forgetful will fail to bear in mind that all jobholders in Ohio don't belong to the party which has been in power. For every Davey administration beneficiary who gets thrown out there's a Republican who'd like to take his place.

The ultimate test of the Bricker administration will be whether its key men can resist pressure to accumulate a new burden of jobholders as the months go by. It won't be easy to do; Republicans have waited a long time to march on Columbus.

Ohio will wait to see whether a new broom can keep on sweeping clean. Gov. Bricker plainly has good intentions, but it remains to be seen whether members of his party will help him to sustain them in the face of job hunger, the chronic ailment of party government.

RELIEF FROM RELIEF

What this country needs is relief from relief. It needs a vacation from partisan wrangling over relief. It needs to quit being concerned over what is and what isn't being done day by day. It needs more administration and less argumentation of relief.

Progress was made when Harry L. Hopkins, singing his swan song as WPA administrator, admitted that if he had the whole road to go over again he wouldn't make any political speeches or remarks. Progress was made when Aubrey Williams, deputy administrator, was transferred to another department. Progress was made when an army officer was placed in full charge of relief administration.

It stands to reason relief can't be taken out of politics nor politics out of relief as long as one political party has everything to gain and the other party has everything to lose by maintaining a close relationship between relief and politics. There are signs a separation now is taking place. The Democratic party, divided within itself, has discovered it has something to lose as well as something to gain by too close identification with relief expenditures and policies.

It's one of the hopeful things about the still new year. At long last the country may get some relief from the relief issue.

IN PRAISE OF SNOW

A nation of snow shovelers fresh from a big weekend at their hobby aren't complaining—much. Even the 30,000-odd men who labored on the streets of New York grimly trying to keep civilization from being covered up are conscious of a privilege bestowed on them.

Shoveling's amazingly good fun when approached as a privilege instead of a chore. A census of snow men, snowballs rolling downhill, snow forts, snow houses and miscellaneous blessings of snow would prove beyond doubt that most of the United States reached some kind of a climax in its affairs during Saturday and Sunday.

Unlike rain, high wind, drouth, and sub-zero spells, nature's other large-scale activities in the weather line, a big snowstorm is easily forgiven. It brings about enough frustration of human enterprise, heaven knows, but it causes almost none of that bitter resentment which follows other "extraordinary" aspects of weather.

This is mainly because snow is something a mortal can get his teeth into. If persistent he even can get rid of it by diligent shoveling. At least he can shove it around, thereby getting a thrill of accomplishment he never gets from dealing with floods, high winds and blistering temperatures in summer.

If there must be winter, there should be snow to go with it.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, January 17

A FAIRLY active and progressive day is the augury based on the lunar transits. There are indications of heightened energies and initiative, which are quite likely to arrest the attention of employers, superiors or others ready and willing to lend support for promotion of sound enterprises. However, there may be a minor change or disturbance and it would be well to keep a sharp lookout for treacherous, crafty or sinister schemes or designing persons.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very enterprising and productive year, with new matters under high initiative and arresting the interest of superiors, employers or others who may be found ready to assist in the promotion of meritorious propositions. However, there are hints of double dealing or other fraudulent or mallic contacts, and there may be an unwelcome upset of plans or unlooked for disturbance. Keep a vigilant eye on all pitfalls.

A child born on this day will be enterprising, creative and practical and its sound talents may enlist the support of those in power, who may assist to success and position in life, possibly in politics or diplomacy.

POWER OF THE PURSE

COLUMBUS, Jan. 16.—The legislative "power of the purse" promises to pack a terrific wallop in taking from Democratic hold-overs what little power they retain in the Ohio governmental setup.

The Ohio senate demonstrated last week the extent of this power through control of the state's funds, in forcing the resignation of Charles S. Leasure, former chairman of the unemployment compensation commission, from a job to which he had just been appointed.

Leasure's reappointment to the unemployment benefit system was balked by insurgent senators just before the end of the year but former Gov. Martin L. Davey arranged to have him named superintendent of canal lands, a position controlled by Public Works Director Carl Wahl, a Davey holdover.

Leasure's new job was not subject to senate confirmation but this branch acted on it nevertheless by deleting from the temporary appropriations bill virtually all salary items for Wahl's department.

Wahl capitulated, Leasure resigned and the department's appropriation was restored. Some Democratic senators planned a vigorous fight on the committee action—contending it smacked of the legislative branch invading prerogatives of the executive department—but were robbed of their opportunity since the appropriation had been restored when the bill reached the floor.

Another state agency under Democrats' control was authoritatively reported to have discharged a Democratic employee in a key job because it was threatened with having its appropriation sharply reduced.

Have You the "Sniffles"? Clendening Tells You Why

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

January 20th is the date of the largest number of colds. It is also the date of the lowest temperature in the United States. So there is a reason for calling colds, "colds."

The incidence of colds is lowest from June 20 to July 28. It begins to rise sharply about the 10th of September. There is another sharp rise in the last week in November, and this rise reaches its peak January 20th. Then there is a gradual and steady fall. March 17th shows about as many colds as November 25th. A drop of 10 degrees increases the incidence of colds nearly one per cent.

These figures were compiled year after year by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, using its employees and their absent days on account of colds as a basis.

Age Is Factor

There is one other important factor in catching cold—age. The largest number of colds occurs in those under four years of age—2,400 in a group studied. The rate falls steadily until it reaches 1000 at the ages of 15 to 24. Then, for some reason, it rises again to 1500 at 35 and then falls steadily, so that people at the age of 55 are practically free from colds.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Both these sets of figures have some significance. Cold weather and especially cold damp weather conditions unquestionably play some part in the tendency to catch cold. Just what the mechanism is cannot be agreed on by all students of the question. Perhaps the best explanation is that based on the experiments of Drs. Taylor and Dyrnforth, of Jacksonville, Florida, as detailed in this column a few days ago.

Their experiments showed that cold water reduces bodily temperatures more rapidly than cold air, thus lowering resistance. Here the factor of getting wet is explained.

Loss of body heat produces definite changes in the membrane of the nose. There is blanching and reduction of blood supply. The temperature of the inside of the nose may go down as much as 10 degrees when the body is exposed to cold. Certainly these changes lower the resistance of the membrane to infection, and make entrance of the virus of the common cold easy.

The white cells of the blood are also reduced on exposure to cold. These are the cells which fight infections of all kinds.

It is worth noting that exercise while exposed to cold does not produce these changes. So that if you have to get cold and wet these days, keep moving around.

All these data support the old-fashioned ideas about keeping bundled up this weather. It is an especially good plan to wear heavy socks or stockings.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

T. M. P.: (1) Is buttermilk fattening? (2) Does constipation cause pimples on the face? (3) Is there anything good for blackheads?

Answer: (1) Buttermilk has a low caloric value and could be considered as a non-fattening food. (2) No. (3) Blackheads are best treated with strong surgical soap and water and the use of a comedone extractor.

MY LOVE IS NEW by IRIS BENNETT

CHAPTER XVII

Blatant music shrieked from the Red Slipper. Parking her car, Rosalind went in and pushed her way through the throng that stood in the doorway. "Let me by!" she cried sharply. When a man at the entrance of the dance floor asked for her ticket, she retorted, "I'm not staying. I'm looking for my husband."

Had she ever danced in this hideous place? She saw the same crowd, the same cheap dresses, the same rowdy room. A boy eyed her with a lecherous look. She pushed her way through the crowd, thinking only of one thing, to get him away!

When he saw her, he stopped. Several other dancing couples stopped still.

"Rosalind, what are you doing here?"

"I came after you!" And then turned her blazing eyes on the girl in white with him. "I heard you call him. Take your hands off him! He's my husband!"

Van cried, "Have you lost your mind to make a scene like this?"

A couple dancing by accidentally collided with them. Van, beside himself with rage and embarrassment, struck the boy and sent him sprawling. Then a friend of the injured boy struck Van and knocked him against another dancing couple.

In a moment it was bedlam. Girls shrieked and ran for the entrance. The music stopped. The manager, rushing to stop them, was cut by a hurled bottle that splintered against his shoulder.

A waiter called the police. Arriving in the midst of the brawling, they seized the worst offenders.

And the waiter who had called pointed to Rosalind. "She started it!"

An officer said, "Come along, sister. You're going, too."

"You can't take me! I'm Mrs. Van Howard!"

He grinned. "Oh, can't I? I don't care who you are. You started a riot. You're going for a ride, too. Better come quietly."

She put her hands to her face and sobbed. But it was too late. Too late. Van, his coat torn, his mouth bleeding, looked at her with hate.

The postman grinned at Constance as he stepped from the porch. Warm rain had just begun to fall and the large drops dotted the sidewalk.

She had looked through the mail when she saw the sleek black car stop and the next moment saw Gordon walk to her through the rain.

He stood very still and a hundred questions rushed through her mind. Had he come back for her? And her first impulse was to go inside and refuse to see him because she knew that with his hand upon her, his eyes looking into hers, and his deep voice tender, she would have no strength but to go with him. Every day and every night she had fought against loving him. She had fought against it as if it were a disease a cure for which she alone must find.

"Hello, Gordon."

He pulled off his hat and looked down on her, almost forgetting for a moment why he had come. Then, frowning, he asked, "Don't you read the morning paper, Constance?"

"The morning paper? Why, no. We don't have it delivered. Why?"

She didn't know! He spoke gently. "I'd like to see your parents. I'm afraid I'm not a bearer of very good tidings."

Leading the way inside, she went upstairs to call her mother. As usual in the summer after school closed, her father had taken a temporary position.

Mother and daughter came into the living room together.

Gordon's dark eyes shifted from one to the other, from the mother in her clean housedress to the vivid Constance in a blue smock.

Then he said, "I've shocking news for you, Mrs. Darby," and saw something terrible happen to her face when he told her of the scene last night in the Red Slipper, that Rosalind and Van had spent the night in jail, and that Nina Howard, ill from the shock and humiliation, had sent him.

Only in time of death in the family had Constance ever seen her mother look like this. Between sobs all that Ruth could say was, "She spoiled her chance! She spoiled her chance!"

"There's a hearing before the magistrate this morning," he said. "Would you like to come with me, Constance? It's rotten that you have to be dragged into something so sordid as this."

Ruth said, "Yes, please go, dear. One of us must be there. I can't go. I couldn't. I couldn't bear to see her there."

In her room Constance changed hurriedly from the smock into a dark dress and a wide-brimmed black straw hat. Her fingers shook. Rosalind—in jail. Would the Howards condone that? Everything was going to pieces and falling on her. She thought, Everything she had been certain of was tearing apart.

In his car, she said, "We've been such a lot of trouble to you and the Howards, Gordon."

"Not you, Constance. There is nothing I wouldn't do for you."

Later she thought that nothing had or could ever be as degrading as seeing Rosalind appear before the sober-faced magistrate that morning. She sat rigidly next to Gordon, seeming not to breathe, and bit down on her lips until they hurt. Drearly the rain beat against the windows.

Rosalind's green dress, fresh and new and lovely the night before, was crushed and wrinkled. Her dark curls were flat and disheveled and her face was pale and shiny from the tears that had dried on it. She looked much more than one day older as she stood beside Van, who did not look at her, and heard the magistrate direct his talk chiefly to her and shame her for her temper and jealousy. But she seemed scarcely to hear what he was saying. Van had not looked at her! And last night he had looked at her with loathing! And all night she had cried and prayed that he would forgive her.

Gordon paid their fines and the four came out in the rain together.

When they came to the car, Constance said, "I'll sit in the back with Rosalind."

Looking first at Gordon and then at Constance, Van said, "I don't want any advice from either of you. I made up my mind last night. Rosalind is going back to Vine street. I'm through!"

Rosalind cried, "No, no, please Van."

He looked at Constance. "A lot of good it did me to settle down and work hard! I stopped drinking and gambling and playing around and I was pretty pleased with myself. I did my best! Tell your mother that. My mother was good to Rosalind. She had an unlimited allowance. She had everything she wanted. But last night . . . a brawl in a road house, insulting a girl she didn't know, a riot, and spending the night in jail . . . I can't forget that. I've been in a lot of scrapes but I've never been in jail before. And my wife, my wife, put me in jail . . ."

Rosalind whimpered, "Please, please . . ."

"You're upset," Gordon said. "You don't know what you're saying."

"Sure I'm upset. Who wouldn't be? But that's all I've got to say. I'm through, and it's final. And I don't want any advice or any pleading. Take her back to Vine street. I'll get home some other way. I'll have a maid pack her things and send them to her." For the first time he looked at Rosalind. "And I loved you! I thought you were something special!"

Constance, sick with shame, held Rosalind all the way home.

Gordon said, "I'll have a talk with Nina and Van tonight and see what I can do. Rosalind is still his wife."

Rosalind, her head against her sister's shoulder, did not speak. There was no fight left in her. All she could think of was Van walking away.

Ruth was waiting on the porch. Seeing Rosalind without Van, she knew she had come home to stay. In the hall she kissed her and smiled a twisted smile and said, "It's all right, dear. You're home!"

All day Rosalind stayed in the little bedroom that had once been hers. Downstairs Constance and her mother heard her walk back and forth. Before dinner the footsteps ceased and Constance went upstairs.

Wearing Constance's old blue satin negligee, Rosalind was sitting on the window ledge, staring out the window.

"Feeling better?"

The younger girl shook her head. "Will I ever feel better than this?" Her mouth tightened. "All over a new dress I wanted to wear last night. I met him at the Red Slipper and I lost him at the Red Slipper. I've made a fine mess of things and I thought I had the world in my hand. Oh, I'm a smart girl, all right. I threw away everything. My temper. Father's temper. I got it honestly from him." Her lips trembled now. "I'm going to miss all the luxury but I—I could do without it if I had Van. I went crazy thinking about him with another girl. I didn't know what I was doing! And I love him so much."

Downstairs a door opened and closed.

"Father," Constance said. "Oh, send him up. Let me get it over. I don't care what he says to me." She looked up. "Constance, do you—do you think there's a chance that the Howards will forgive me?" Her eyes implored Constance to tell her that they would. "I'm a fine one to ask anything of you the way I've treated you since Van and I were married. You were right. It went to my head. Why didn't you shake some sense in me and bring me down to earth? I'm down to earth now. Last night did that. If only I hadn't gone there."

Constance said, "Gordon is going to talk to them tonight."

"It won't help. They're through with me. Van has a lot of ways of forgetting he was ever married to me. And a lot of girls will be glad he's free."

LEADS BRITISH AIR REARMING

Lord Nuffield Aids In Speeding Up Planes Being Produced

LONDON. — Lord Nuffield, multimillionaire philanthropist at the age of 61, is leading and speeding up Britain's air rearmament drive. He has been awarded an order for 1,000 Spitfire fighter planes, the biggest aircraft order ever given to a single concern, and he is virtual dictator in this sphere of Britain's rearmament campaign.

A recent announcement by War Minister Leslie Hore Belisha revealed that Nuffield, in addition to building airplanes, will have a hand in air defense work. He is to make numerous anti-aircraft guns. Furthermore, he has told ministers concerned that he does not want to be remunerated for his efforts.

Made Honorary Colonel With the honorary rank of colonel, Nuffield heads the 52nd (London) anti-aircraft brigade of Territorials. He annually hands the brigade $2,500 for equipment and frequently presents troops with other aids, such as buses for transporting members to the country for training.

Starting his career as a bicycle builder on a capital of $25, the former William Richard Morris now is spending $15,000,000 building and equipping an aircraft factory at Birmingham. Meanwhile, he has distributed more than $60,000,000 to universities, hospitals, churches, schools, medical and other needy institutions. Benefactions of less than $5,000 are not registered in his official list.

Graduating from the bicycle to the motorcycle, Nuffield eventually made his millions by building automobiles and selling them at a price within the reach of many thousands of people in Britain and throughout the empire. He became Britain's leading mass producer of automobiles with his Morris works at Cowley, near Oxford, covering 82 acres, with an annual production of more than 100,000 cars. The plant employs 30,000 men.

Opposed "Shadow" Scheme In October, 1936, Lord Nuffield quarreled with Air Minister Lord Swinton in connection with the government's "shadow" factory scheme for armaments manufacture. He had spent $500,000 of his own money on a factory for airplane motors. He complained that he was then being asked to waste public money building another factory, and he described the government's aircraft industry scheme as unworkable.

The controversy led to a debate in the House of Lords in which Nuffield spoke only nine words, referring to the army's use of his factory. Lord Swinton made a statement in the debate explaining the government's plans regarding the "shadow" factories for aero engines. This was regarded as amicably settling the dispute.

When Sir Kingsley Wood became air minister he obtained Nuffield's cooperation, resulting in the latter's decision to build the $15,000,000 airplane factory capable of building air frames at the rate of 5,000 a year.

E. L. Grate Motor Company Showing Exceptional Bargains In Used Automobiles

CARE LENGTHENS LIFE OF AUTO

Lee Butler's Pennzoil Products Good For Your Car

If you read the instruction book that comes with your new car, you will observe that it gives considerable space to lubrication.

The automobile of today is much different mechanically from the best of cars made only a few years ago. Few would fully understand the differences if they were written out by an engineer, but, roughly, we know that moving parts are made to fit much closer, and because of this oil manufacturers have developed lubricants to match the new car requirements.

No one oil or grease will suffice. Most cars require about 10 entirely different products to assure the motorist of proper lubrication, and only proper lubrication, after all, will give the carefree long mileage built into the present day machine.

There are many who gamble with cheap oil and in so doing save a few pennies per gallon but actually cause dollars' worth of damage to their motors in repair bills. Many rings are replaced simply because poor lubrication caused unnecessary wear. This is only one common result. Every moving part will wear if not properly lubricated.

Lee Butler's Pennzoil station, W. State and Jennings, has complete charts giving the car manufacturer's recommendations as to quality and grade of both oil and greases to be used at different seasons of the year.

If you have not had your car serviced recently, drop in at Butler's and you may be sure that the job will be done perfectly.

Improved Bath Room

The bathroom shown in the "before and after" picture was subjected to a complete modernization. An example of the average bathroom of 10 years ago is shown in the upper picture. Little attempt was made to beautify the room. Although adequate, fixtures were clumsy in appearance and occupied more space than was necessary.

In the "after" picture, the bathroom is shown with black accessories, neat side lights, black and white contrasting tiling, decorative mirror and an added facility, a built-in shower. All old fixtures have been replaced by modern, stream-lined plumbing.

Modernization of a home has no more popular beginning than in the bathroom. Few homes are being built now without two bathrooms or a bathroom and an extra lavatory. Plumbing authorities have learned that essential fixtures can be placed in much less space than previously needed.

J. R. Stratton, veteran Salem plumber, will assist in planning the modern bathroom and will furnish all plumbing equipment needed. Finest quality workmanship is assured. A telephone call or visit to the S. Broadway office of the Stratton company will open the way for this improvement.

MAKE DELIVERY OF NEW COUPES

Plymouth Distributing New Convertible Coupe

Plymouth's new convertible coupe, with power-operated top that raises or lowers itself in response to the twist of a lever on the instrument board, is now in regular production at the factory, and deliveries have begun through Plymouth dealers in several parts of the country. It is announced by the J. G. Smith garage, local dealer.

After virtually "stealing the show" wherever advance models of this ingenious body type were displayed at the auto shows, the new coupe has created an unprecedented demand that accounts for early production on this type. Factory orders to date already far exceed the volume of similar orders received in previous years.

Exceptional convenience of the self-operating top, and the closed-car comfort provided by Plymouth's scientific insulation against cold, heat and noise, are believed chiefly responsible for leveling out former seasonal fluctuations in the convertible market. A new convertible sedan will soon be added to the Plymouth line.

Standard Equipment

The power-operated top is standard equipment, at no extra cost, on all Plymouth 1939 model convertible coupes. It is a special weather-proof fabric, able to withstand the more frequent foldings which are expected of the new top. It comes in either the standard tan, or an optional black shade of the same material that effectively resists the smoke, dirt and dust of city-driving.

Raising or lowering the top is controlled by a two-way lever on the instrument panel, at the driver's left. This opens and closes valves admitting manifold suction to two power cylinders, one on each side of the car, behind the front seat.

These two power cylinders, each 15 inches long, contain double-end pistons for exerting power either way, which in turn are geared up to the folding frame of the top.

Special springs counterweight the top as it moves in either direction. Raising or lowering is accomplished in about 15 seconds.

A single handle at the top of the windshield locks or unlocks the top with one motion, at the anchor hooks on three attachment posts. Above the main control switch is a warning, "Do not operate while car is in motion," to avoid possible sail-boat effects that might rip the fabric. Best results are obtained at engine idling speed, with throttle closed.

Near End of Ford Final Assembly Line

VISITORS to the Ford Rouge plant, largest industrial development in the world, are fascinated by this scene. It is the "body drop" on the continuous final assembly line, the point where car bodies are lowered onto rubber-cushioned chassis. An electric mechanism makes the descent so simple that plant tourists often pause a few minutes to see the process repeated several times. Workers shown above are guiding the body of a Ford V-8 DeLuxe Tudor sedan into position on the chassis. Mercury cars are assembled on a parallel line.

MILLION MILES WITH 2 TRUCKS

Two Ford V-8's Operating With Efficiency of New Cars

Two Ford V-8 trucks with an aggregate of over a million miles to their credit are still operating with new truck efficiency, according to information obtained by the Ford Motor company, Dearborn, Mich.

The width of the continent separates the two units, one being located in Charleston, S. C., and the other in Los Angeles, Calif.

The one in Charleston is owned by the Petroleum Carrier Corporation with headquarters in Jacksonville, Fla. It is a 1934 tractor-truck which has accumulated over 600,000 miles pulling a gasoline tank trailer.

Since being placed in service Sept. 5, 1934, this unit has transported over four million gallons of gasoline. For the first three and one-half years it was attached to a 3,000 gallon tank-trailer. For the past year it has pulled a 2,100 gallon tank-trailer.

It has averaged 9.76 miles to the gallon of fuel according to accurate records maintained by the company.

Reduction of Used Auto Invoice Is "Break" For Buyer

The E. L. Grate Motor Co., South Ellsworth ave., is offering one of the finest lists of used cars that it has been their pleasure to present for some time, and each car with the Grate dependability guarantee behind it.

As virtually every automobile buyer, or anyone familiar with the automobile business, knows, a dealer can tie up a tremendous amount of ready cash in his used automobiles. One of the most important departments of any automobile agency, therefore, is the used car department. The new automobiles of this day are not hard to sell and the average automobile owner has learned to trade in frequently.

Consequently, there are scores and scores of fine automobiles, classified as used cars because they find their way back to the dealer through a new car sale, available in any given district.

The popularity of the new Ford is, of course, without question. As a result, the Grate Motor Co., is able to offer a wonderful variety of fine used cars, traded in on new Fords, or the newer, more recent Mercury, latest product of the Ford factories.

Grate used cars are renovated, brought up to the standard in every respect and when they are turned over to the buyer, they are guaranteed to work in just the way in which they are sold by the company. In other words, they will live up to every claim made by the company.

Grate has a number of the late models and makes and is anxious to take them off his floor, not only to make room for new cars but also to liquidate his investment in them. As a result, prices are shaved to the minimum in order to stimulate sales.

If you're in the market for good transportation, at the least expense possible, drop in at Grate's.

YOUNGSTOWN RAYEN QUAKERS' FOURTH VICTIM

QUAKERS LOOK TOWARD TILTS THIS WEEKEND

Salem Record Bolstered By Victories Over Alliance, Rayen

Their 1938-39 basketball record bolstered by two victories last weekend, Coach Herb Brown's Salem High school Quakers looked forward today to a pair of engagements scheduled for this week.

The Quakers will face East Palestine's Bulldogs in a Columbiana county court contest at the local gym Friday night in their first game of the week. Their second game will come Saturday night when they engage Youngstown East's well-mated quintet at the East gymnasium where the annual sectional tournament is played.

The Quakers posted their fourth victory of the season and their second win in a row in the Steel City last Saturday night, 25 to 22, before a small crowd, composed to a large extent of Salem fans.

Brown's charges were forced to stage off a second-half rally by the Rayenites to chalk up the victory. Trailing by seven points at half-time, Rayen cut the Quakers lead to two points in the third quarter, then proceeded to tie the count at 19-all early in the fourth frame. The Quakers collected a field goal and four free throws to again pull out in front and remain ahead until the end of the game.

Although they made only half of their free throws, foul shooting enabled the Quakers to top their Youngstown rival. Outscored from the field, eight goals to seven, the Quakers made 11 free throws to Rayen's six to gain the victory.

The Salem lads were given 22 foul shots during the game, but the best they could do was to make half of these. Rayen also converted half of its free throws, making six out of 12.

Rough play throughout the game cost Rayen the services of four of its regulars in the fourth quarter. Forwards Armstrong and Floyd and Center Antonucci were sent to the sidelines in the final period for committing too many fouls, while Guard Naples was ousted from the game for hitting Glen Duncan of Salem in the face in the fourth frame. Naples swung on Duncan when the two players tumbled to the floor after fighting to gain possession of the ball.

A disastrous third-period came near costing the Quakers a victory. After piling up a seven-point lead in the first and second quarters, the Salem lads went scoreless in the third frame while Rayen chalked up five points.

The Quakers missed five straight foul shots and several tries from the field in the third period.

In addition to the third quarter, the Quakers were also outscored in the second quarter when the Youngstown team made nine points to Salem's eight. The Rayen performance in the second quarter, however, did not hurt the Quakers to any extent inasmuch as they had built up an eight-point lead in the first period by outscoring the Youngstown team, nine points to one.

The Quakers looked their best in the first and second periods when they were performing smoothly on both offensive and defense. They were handling the ball well, passing smoothly and working down into the corners where they could cut or the basket to take short shots.

Rayen apparently solved the Quakers offensive style during the halftime intermission for the Youngstown team came back in the third and fourth quarters to practically tie up the Salem attack. The Rayen players were guarding the Quakers close in back court in the third half and as a result they had up much of the Salem ball-working and passing.

Because they came out to admit the Salem players in back court in the second half, the Quakers defense was spread wide place. However, the Quakers were unable to take advantage of this due to inaccuracy of the passing passes which they were forced to throw.

Incidence of the downfall of the Quakers attack in the second half signified in the fact that they made only one field goal during this time. They collected six field goals in the first half when they were guarded so close in back court they had more time to set up their play.

When the Quakers attack bogged down in the third quarter, Coach Brown experimented with the line-up using Burton Sutter, Jim Dickey, Mike Oana in an attempt to give a new life in the Quakers' offense.

A removed Amos Dunlap, Bill Weckert and Duncan from the game.

Schaeffer led the Quakers in scoring, making two field goals and six free throws for 10 points. Schaeffer looked exceptionally classy at the pivot position in the first half when he was playing an important part in the Quakers' offense. He connected on a hook shot from the pivot for the first time of the season in the first period.

The Salem reserves were handed their first defeat of the season in the preliminary game, losing to Rayen reserves, 28 to 24, after a hard, rough contest which came near rivaling a football game in the fourth quarter.

4 TEAMS TIED FOR TOP SPOT IN OHIO LOOP

Ashland, Capital, Wooster and Case Lead Conference

By FRITZ HOWELL
COLUMBUS, Jan. 16.—Basketballs will fly all over Ohio this week as the collegiate cagers present a 42-game program, the last big spurge before taking time out for mid-year examinations.

The slate includes one Western conference fray, 15 in the Ohio league, three in the Buckeye and 16 with out-of-state opponents.

The tightest Ohio conference race in years is in the making, with the league's four unbeaten teams deadlocked in first place with four straight wins. Ashland, Capital, Wooster and Case are in the four-way tie, all the others having been defeated at least once with the exception of Toledo, which has played no conference events.

The Buckeye loop has Ohio U. out front with two straight, Marshall hanging on to second place with a single win. The leaders don't tangle until Feb. 14.

Frank Baumholtz of Ohio U. retained his high-average scoring lead with an 18.2 mark on 164 points for nine games, less than a point ahead of Chuck Chuckovits of Toledo, who has 191 in 11 games for a mark of 17.3.

The week's slate: Monday: Ohio State at Illinois, Baldwin-Wallace at Toledo, Western Reserve at Notre Dame, Xavier-DePaul at Chicago.

Tuesday: Denison at Ohio Northern, Findlay at Heidelberg, Wooster at Mt. Union, Oberlin at Muskingum, Hiram at Thiel, Youngstown at West Liberty, Rio Grande at Mountain State, Cincinnati at Marshall.

Wednesday: Miami at Ohio U., Dayton at Wesleyan, Capital at Kenyon, Penn at Akron, John Carroll at Duquesne, Youngstown at Davis-Ekins, Tri-State at Griffin.

Thursday: Otterbein at Marietta, Ashland at Kent State, Lawrence Tech at Findlay.

Friday: Bowling Green at Mount Union, Muskingum at Ohio Northern, Bluffton at Defiance, DeSales at Chippewas, New River State at Rio Grande, Akron at Chicago.

Saturday: Marshall at Dayton, Baldwin-Wallace at John Carroll, Marietta at Capital, Muskingum at Findlay, Kent State at Wooster, Oberlin at Otterbein, Wilkeson at Denison, Bowling Green at Hiram, Alumni at Heidelberg, Case at Western Reserve, Alumni at Cincinnati, Detroit at Xavier, Wilberforce at Bluffton, and Ohio State at Army.

Theatre Attractions

Jack Benny fans have a treat in the maestro-comedian's newest picture, "Artists and Models Abroad," which shows tonight and Tuesday at the State.

Playing a brassy American theatrical hooper stranded with his troupe of beauties at the Paris Exposition, Benny is teamed with a new leading lady, Joan Bennett, in a hilarious story written by Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse, the famed writers of musical comedy successes and authors of the sensation of a few seasons ago "Anything Goes."

Romance
Against the fascinating, ultramodern background of the Exposition, "Artists and Models Abroad," traces Benny's madcap romance with the daughter of a Texas oil tycoon, Miss Bennett, whom he meets at a sidewalk cafe and invites to join his gang, thinking her as broke as himself.

The story gallops forward with the arrival of Miss Bennett's father, a fun-loving old codger, played by

"Buck" Benny in a scene from "Artists and Models Abroad," showing at the State tonight and Tuesday.

Charley Grapewin, who also joins the crew as a lark, without revealing his wealth.

Taking Miss Bennett and Grape-win in tow, Benny goes through one hilarious adventure after another, including flights from irate hotel-keepers across Paris roofs, nights spent "camping out" in the Exposition halls, a flirtation with an old dray horse who remembers him from the old prairies and finally the theft of one of France's most valuable art treasures, inadvertently, of course.

Forced to Choose
As a word of reassurance to Benny radio fans, Jack does make love to Miss Bennett by hanging out of a hotel window upside down. In fact, this is the general tone of their romance throughout the picture, which winds up with Jack forced to choose between a hooper's freedom and a millionaire's life of ease.
On the musical side, "Artists and Models Abroad" presents four new hit songs from the pen of Robin and Tanager and another composed by Max McGowan and Ed. G. Burns, pure Club Boys, who play members of Benny's troupe.

Had Franco Plans

Harold Goodman, British vice consul, shown at San Sebastian, Spain, was as much surprised as were Franco officials when plans for the Franco Spanish offensive were found in his diplomatic pouch during a trip from San Sebastian to St. Jean de Luz. Franco postponed drive as he battled revolt within his own ranks, according to reports. Loyalist spies had obtained plans of drive.

Here and There - About Town

Nice Doggie! Nice Doggie!

Police were called Sunday evening when attendants at the Grand theater were unable to eject a dog which got into the building.

Patrolman Paul Ormsby coaxed
the dog and tried other tactics—to no avail.

At a restaurant the officer got a half-pound of hamburger. Returning to the theater, Ormsby thought the dog was as good as out, with this kind of bait.

But "Fido" politely gulped down the meat and stayed where it was warm.

Ormsby gave up, but learned afterwards that the dog followed a group of boys out of the theater.
